

AAC Publications

---

Fall on Rock

Colorado, Boulder, First Flatiron

On July 10 an inexperienced climber seconding the First Flatiron injured his ankle while being belayed and could not move. The leader did not have sufficient equipment to effect self-rescue. Rescuers climbed to both the injured climber and belayer and rappelled to the ground. (Source: Daniel Lack, RMRG.)

Analysis

Because of the Flatirons' proximity to Boulder and the road, there are frequent incidents of this type. While in many of these incidents the individuals are not really climbers, we have no choice but to count them. (Source: Aram Attarian.)

Images

Article Details

Author
Publication	ANAM
Volume	10
Issue	66
Page	48
Copyright Date	2013
Article Type	Accident reports