

AAC Publications

FATAL FALL ON ROCK

Montana, Glacier National Park, Mt. Brown

On June 7, a 19-year-old Columbia Falls man died following a climbing accident on Mt. Brown in Glacier National Park. Park officials received a call around 3:00 p.m. regarding a missing person. Two individuals planned to hike and climb Mt. Brown. One of the team members lost contact with their climbing partner. National Park Service personnel searched for the missing climber and Two Bear Air located the decedent's body around 7:00 p.m.

ANALYSIS

Circumstances leading to the death are unknown. Traveling mountainous terrain alone entails a higher level of risk. Members of a group should endeavor to stay together and communicate if separated. (Source: National Park Service.)

Images

Article Details

| | |
|----------------|-----------------------|
| Author | National Park Service |
| Publication | ANAM |
| Volume | 13 |
| Issue | 76 |
| Page | 57 |
| Copyright Date | 2023 |
| Article Type | Accident reports |